Mayor's Corner

Downey is bursting with activities this summer

By Rick Rodriguez
Mayor

Summer is here and with that comes the opportunity to enjoy our city! Every year our Parks & Recreation Department works hard to put together a wide variety of programs and events for our students and residents to enjoy during the summer months.

The first Twilight Summer Concert of the year will be on June 12. Concerts are held at Furman Park every Wednesday at 7 pm through July 17. Come and enjoy our beautiful Southern California weather as you dance to Country, Salsa and Swing. Bring your picnic blankets, lawn chairs and dancing shoes. Food, beverages and snacks will be available for sale. Pets are welcome as long as they are kept on a leash.

Another great event happening at our City's park is the Golden Music & More event. Enjoy family fun under the stars at Golden Park on August 3 at 5 pm. The Tease Band will be playing the best in Latin, R&B, Top-40, Old School, 80's, 90's and more. For the little ones, "Sing" the movie will play at dusk on a large inflatable outdoor screen.

With school out for summer, the city has several options for kids to play, learn and be safe. "Wilderness Camp" is open to 6 to 14-year-olds and will be held at Furman Park. The "Performing Arts Camp" is open to 8 to 15-year-olds and will be at Golden Park. "Playground Adventures" will be held at various city parks and is open to 6 to 12-year-olds. The "Girls on Fire Summer" workshop is for 6th to 12th grade girl students of the Downey Unified School District. The Columbia Memorial Space Center is will be offering robotics and engineering camp for children ages 9 to 14-year-olds.

For more information and to register for these camps please visit downeyca.org and columbiaspacescience.org.

Summer is also a great time for older kids to volunteer. Join the City of Downey Volunteer Program and become a part of something great. A list of city opportunities as well as local organizations can be found on the city's website.

For information on volunteer opportunities, follow us on our Facebook page or contact the City's Volunteer Coordinator Juddy Montenegro at jmontenegro@downeyca.org or 562-904-7284.

The Downey Youth Commission application process is open. We are seeking eager student leaders interested in becoming involved and learning more about our municipal government system. Deadline to submit application to City Clerk's office is July 10.

Stay Healthy Downey is a community collaborative that focuses on health and nutrition. They have been working with local organizations and health providers such as the Whole Child, Alta Med and the LA County Department of Health to bring health and wellness classes to our community. Classes are free of charge and are held at the Barbara J. Riley Community & Senior Center and are available for ages 12 and up.

To get to all of these events make sure to take the DowneyLINK, the City's public transit system. All routes begin and end at the Downey Depot Transpiration Center located at 8150 Nance Street and fare is only 50¢ a ride.

The Neighborhood Beautification Awards Program is going on now until June 21st. This program was established to recognize and reward residents, property owners and businesses for improvements and maintenance of their properties. Through their efforts, they strive to make our community a more inviting and beautiful place to live and work. Visit downeyca.org for an application.

Thank you to all our Downey residents who continue to make our city great. I am always available for any questions or ideas you may have. Happy Summer!

The one place kids still play outside

BY LENORE SKENAZY

Most of us remember playing outside till the streetlights came on, but our kids can't because of (fill in the blank) crime, creeps, traffic, tennis lessons, homework, no one else outside, all of the above.

Except at RV parks (and probably at regular campgrounds, too, but I haven't been to those). Park your camper, open the door and spill out the kids. They run around like it's the Sputnik era. But if they were "safe" back home, chances are they'd be inside — or, at best, supervised at soccer.

As a gal who spends most of her time trying to persuade parents to loosen their terrified grip, I asked RVers, campground owners and a Harvard professor what gives. It seems to boil down to:

1) Cramped quarters.

"A family of four in 429 square feet is different than a family in 2,000 square feet," says Eric Gaden. He's a traveling nurse — yes, that's right, a nurse who travels to temporary gigs in his RV with his wife and sons, 5 and 8. They've been on the road for four years now, and whenever they land at a new campground, he says, his kids discover "the hiding places and secret places the adults will never see."

That's in part because he and his wife kick them outside. "When we lived in a house, I could say, 'Go to your room!' But here they're just 6 feet further away," says Gaden. So, out they go. And a child in nature tends to remain in nature.

2) Kids are their own kid magnets.

"The other day, I was going around the campground, and there were five little kids, probably 6 years old — three boys and two girls — on the dock fishing, and there were no parents anywhere," says Dave Schneider, owner of the Indian Trails Campground in Pardeeville, Wisconsin. Once there are a few kids outside, others join them. But in the 'burbs, often the parks are empty. Or the only kids out there are part of a program, like Little League, so other kids can't spontaneously join in. Here, everyone's footloose, so kids can swarm. And fish.

3) Unscheduled time.

See above. When kids are away from home, they're also away from karate, Kumon, kickboxing ... This not only gives them free time but also forces them to come up with something to do: "Let's make a fort!" Working together happens to be how children (and adults) make friends, says natural playground designer Rusty Keeler. So the kids become instant buddies.

4) Assumption of friendliness.

If you're at a campground, you're approachable, if only because you're often outside — a sitting duck. That means anyone needing a little assistance may ask you for it and vice versa. (When we went RVing, we asked complete strangers to park our camper for us.)

"People are so friendly at campgrounds the parents feel safer," says Kathy Kasper, who runs the Lazy River campground in Granville, Ohio. By defining yourself as a helpful member of a friendly community (however temporary), you feel a great oneness. This translates into trust.

5) It's tribal.

You've circled the wagons. You've set up camp. And now you are sitting around a fire. That's as ancient as it gets, says David Ropeik, a Harvard instructor, author of "How Risky Is It, Really?: Why Our Fears Don't Always Match the Facts" and — most saliently — a dad who took the family on a 4,000-mile RV trip. "In the morning, we'd head out, and in the afternoon, we'd call ahead, and there was absolutely a sense of safety and relief as soon as the campground said, 'Yeah, we have a place for you.' It wasn't a hotel room. It was being in and amongst community."

Affiliation, free time and being outside seem to be the key ingredients that allow parents to trust each other enough to let their kids run wild.

And a few beers probably don't hurt, either.

When a traffic ticket costs $13,000

BY EMILY REINA DINDIAL AND RONALD J. LAMPARD

For most people living in America, transportation is central to daily life. About 83 percent of Americans report that they regularly drive a car multiple times a week. Yet millions of drivers across the country have had their licenses suspended — taking away their ability to drive to work, school, the grocery store or the doctor — essentially because they are poor.

In 2014, Leah Jackson was ticketed for obstructing traffic in Otsego, Minn., after turning left at a red light. That kind of thing happens to many people. But, as Ms. Jackson explained to state lawmakers in 2018 testimony, she had just started a new job and hadn't yet received a paycheck, so she couldn't pay the $135 fine right away.

A few months later, she was pulled over, told her driver's license was suspended for an unpaid ticket and cited for driving with a suspended license — a new $200 ticket. Her job responsibilities as a retail store manager required her to make bank runs and other deliveries, so she kept driving in order to keep her job. In less than a month, she received two more tickets for driving with a suspended license. After accounting for the additional tickets and the resulting increase in her monthly insurance premiums, her debt from the initial infraction spiraled into more than $13,000 over four and a half years.

The criminal justice system too often produces a self-perpetuating cycle, particularly for the poorest people, who can't pay fines or hire lawyers to make charges go away. In 39 states, you can lose your driving privileges if you're unable to pay a court fine or fee, for things as minor as a traffic violation. But a bipartisan effort is growing to end the fundamentally unjust practice of wealth-based suspensions.

On May 7, Gov. Steve Bullock of Montana signed a bill to eliminate wealth-based driver's license suspensions. Montana joins the District of Columbia and a handful of states, including California, Idaho, Maine, Mississippi and Virginia, that have recently stopped suspending driver's licenses for unpaid debt. State legislatures in Illinois and Oregon are expected to vote on whether to end the practice in their states later this month.

The American Civil Liberties Union and the American Legislative Exchange Council, which typically take conflicting positions on policy debates, are aligned on this issue: Driver's license suspensions should be imposed for the limited purpose of keeping unsafe drivers off the road, not as a debt-collection mechanism. State legislatures, courts and motor vehicle administrators should work together to eliminate laws and policies that permit driver's licenses to be suspended for reasons unrelated to a person's ability to drive, including nonpayment of fines and fees.

Suspending people's driver's licenses because they can't afford to pay fines or fees is unfair. The A.C.L.U.'s position is that it is unconstitutional.

It's also just bad policy. Wealth-based suspensions are at best ineffective and at worst destructive to the purpose of ensuring compliance with unpaid debt. They also drain resources that could otherwise be used to enforce laws that protect communities from drivers who engage in behavior that could actually threaten public safety, such as drunken driving. Union County, Ohio, found that driving-while-suspended violations cost an average of nine hours of officer and court time. That's valuable time that could be spent advancing public safety rather than collecting debts from people struggling to make ends meet.

Stripping people of their driver's licenses makes it more difficult for them to earn a living and, by extension, more difficult for them to pay off their debts. A 2011 study found that in New Jersey, 42 percent of drivers who lost their licenses also lost their jobs. In Phoenix, people who lost their licenses lost an average of $36,800 of annual income. Most people in the United States have limited access to reliable public transportation, so driving is often their only realistic means of transportation. The reality is that many people who drive with suspended licenses do so out of necessity. In the process, they risk additional fines, fees and even incarceration, all of which make it extremely difficult for them to pay their outstanding court debts.

One of the concerns of opponents of this type of legislation is that eliminating a punishment for nonpayment of court debt will result in a decrease in revenue that courts and other government agencies depend on to finance their operations. But government services should be paid for through a general fund, not through burdensome fines and fees on individuals.

Lawmakers across the country should work to eliminate wealth-based driver's license suspensions.

The doctors who put their lives on the line

BY THE NEW YORK TIMES EDITORIAL BOARD

On May 31, 2009, Scott Roeder drove to Reformation Lutheran Church in Wichita, Kan. He had attended services there before, but he was not a worshiper. He had visited Reformation Lutheran to track the movements of a particular church member, Dr. George Tiller, who provided abortions at a nearby clinic.

On that day in 2009, Mr. Roeder carried out the mission he'd been planning: He walked up to Dr. Tiller as he was handing out programs and greeting fellow parishioners in the church foyer. Knowing that Dr. Tiller customarily wore body armor, Mr. Roeder put a .22-caliber handgun to the doctor's head and pulled the trigger.

In the decade since Dr. Tiller's assassination, the violence and harassment inflicted on those who work in abortion clinics have become only more routine. A Molotov cocktail thrown through the window of a Planned Parenthood building, a clinic escort hit by an anti-abortion activist's car — both episodes that happened in the past several months — barely garner headlines. While most people who protest abortion reject violence, among their ranks are zealots who believe that the perceived killing of embryos and fetuses justifies murder. And abortion providers worry about even one of those zealots being emboldened by a political environment that's spawned extreme anti-abortion legislation around the country this year.

George Tiller did not set out to become an abortion provider, let alone one of the most targeted figures in the American abortion debate. A longtime Republican and former Navy flight surgeon, Dr. Tiller took over his late father's family medical practice in 1970, thinking it would be a sleepy job. He soon learned that his father had quietly provided safe abortions at the office in the decades before the procedure was legal in Kansas — a history detailed in Stephen Singular's 2012 book "A Death in Wichita."

After initially resisting following in his father's footsteps, Dr. Tiller was swayed by the relentless demand for abortions from women in the community, and by the Roe v. Wade Supreme Court decision in 1973 that made the procedure legal in every state. "I am a woman-educated physician," Dr. Tiller said years later. He went on to become an expert in diagnosing rare fetal anomalies — cancers, fluid in the skull, undeveloped organs — and performing abortions on women facing these devastating circumstances later in their pregnancies. He also helped find homes for babies women wished to put up for adoption. He came to see his work as a spiritual calling.

As legally risky as his father's clandestine efforts had been, Dr. Tiller's career coincided with political and cultural shifts that made it physically dangerous for doctors and staff members at abortion clinics.

In 1980, Ronald Reagan was elected president thanks largely to a new evangelical voting bloc that was rallied by his anti-abortion, pro-family values platform. Over the following decades, as abortion became further entrenched in the American culture wars, a handful of anti-abortion lawmakers, like former Senator Tom Coburn of Oklahoma, called for abortion providers to receive the death penalty.

And abortion providers indeed started to die — not in the death chamber, but at the hands of anti-abortion extremists. Dr. David Gunn in 1993. Dr. John Britton in 1994. Dr. Barnett Slepian in 1998. Two receptionists, a clinic escort, an off-duty police officer and others were also killed during acts of anti-abortion violence during that time, and there were many hundreds of nonlethal violent incidents, including bombings and attempted assassinations. One such assassination attempt was carried out in 1985 at the home of Justice Harry Blackmun, who wrote the Supreme Court opinion in the Roe v. Wade decision. (Though the justice and his wife were at home at the time, they were unharmed.)

By the late 1970s, word had spread of Dr. Tiller's work, and his clinic was attracting protesters who would chant, "Tiller, Tiller, the baby killer." Some of them followed Dr. Tiller and his staff members to their homes and put graphic images of fetal remains in their neighbors' mailboxes. Others phoned in death threats to the clinic. Someone set up a website listing the personal contact information for the staff.

Dr. Tiller sought advice from security experts, who gave him tips, such as to drive in the right lane to limit the angles available to potential shooters, and he started giving his employees "combat pay" bonuses to keep them from quitting. He eventually bought an armored S.U.V. to drive to and from the clinic, and for two and a half years federal marshals were by his side for much of each day. He also varied his route between the clinic and his home, where he lived with his wife and four children.

He took these precautions because the threats that his clinic received were not all idle. The facility was pipe-bombed in 1986, causing $100,000 in damage. And in 1993, Dr. Tiller was shot in both arms by an anti-abortion extremist named Rachelle Shannon. (Ms. Shannon, who also committed a series of clinic bombings and acid attacks, was released from prison last year.) Neither the bomb nor the shooting deterred him; he was back at work the day after the shooting. Nor was he cowed when thousands of protesters, some of them aggressive, descended on his clinic and tried to block access to it during the so-called Summer of Mercy in 1991.

Dr. Tiller also stayed strong while Bill O'Reilly, the erstwhile Fox News personality, went on a nationally broadcast campaign against him in the years before his murder. Mr. O'Reilly compared Dr. Tiller to Hitler, said he was "executing babies" and noted in 2006: "If I could get my hands on Tiller ... Can't be vigilantes. Can't do that. It's just a figure of speech."

Sanchez: Trump's immigration proposal is 'inadequate'

Rep. Linda Sanchez (D-38), chair of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Immigration Task Force, last week released the following statement on President Trump's latest immigration proposal:

"Our nation's immigration system is broken. Unfortunately, President Trump's woefully inadequate proposal is not what America needs. His plan fails to make the changes necessary to overhaul America's immigration system for the 21st century. It is time both parties get serious about adopting an immigration policy that builds on our country's great tradition of diversity and reflects our values of compassion and fairness.

"America needs common sense immigration reform that fixes our broken system, deals humanely with refugees fleeing their home

A few years later, of course, someone did get his hands on the doctor.

(After Dr. Tiller's death, Mr. O'Reilly said that "Americans should condemn" his murder and that "anarchy and vigilantism will destroy a society.")

Today, abortion providers face an even more volatile political backdrop than Dr. Tiller did during his lifetime. In the years after Dr. Tiller's murder, state legislatures passed hundreds of anti-abortion regulations intended to shut down abortion clinics and make it harder for women to access the procedure. Then came Donald Trump, who became president thanks in large part to the support of evangelical voters counting on him to deliver anti-abortion Supreme Court justices and other judges — a promise that he has fulfilled, leading anti-abortion lawmakers in states around the country to pass a rash of near-total abortion bans this year.

Since the 2016 election, abortion providers have reported a spike in incidents of vandalism, trespassing, harassment and picketing. According to the National Abortion Federation, which tracks such data, in 2018 abortion providers were subject to at least 1,135 trespassing incidents in the United States and Canada — up from 823 incidents in 2017 and 264 in 2013, when there were more abortion clinics in America than there are today. And last year they experienced nearly 122,600 disruptive events, including internet harassment, bomb threats and picketing. In 2017, that number was fewer than 97,000, and in 2013 it was fewer than 6,500.

Many providers and experts are concerned about enforcement of the federal Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act, which was passed during the Clinton administration to bar the use of "force or threat of force or ... physical obstruction" to keep people from entering reproductive health clinics. Hesitant to wade into a heated political issue, local police officers allow violations of the law to slide, further emboldening the activists.

Amy Hagstrom Miller, the founder and chief executive of the Whole Woman's Health network of abortion clinics, has had reason to call on law enforcement recently: In April, she said, someone set fire to the fence outside the Whole Woman's clinic in McAllen, Tex. The clinic, which is the only abortion facility for nearly 250 miles, has become a hotbed of anti-abortion activity, sometimes attracting hundreds of protesters at a time. It is less than 10 miles from the Mexican border and serves mostly women of color, and Ms. Hagstrom Miller said that it has started to attract protesters with white nationalist tattoos.

Ms. Hagstrom Miller also worries about President Trump saying at his rallies, wrongly, that women and doctors routinely "execute" babies. "This kind of language and rhetoric," she said, "doesn't just fall on the ears of well-balanced people."

countries, and gives deserving people a chance to become equal members of society. What the president is proposing is a xenophobic, anti-immigrant agenda that if applied to previous generations would have barred millions of European and Asian immigrants from contributing to our country. President Trump needs to get serious if he wants to fix the immigration system.

"For more than three decades, the Congressional Hispanic Caucus has played a vital role in the development of our country's immigration policies. We are proud of the expertise, experience, and understanding we have developed working on this important issue. If the president is serious about fixing our immigration system, he needs to drop his impractical, extreme views and work with the CHC on sensible, common sense legislation that will benefit our country for future generations."

Sanchez represents California's 38th Congressional district, which includes Norwalk.

GetFit is a comprehensive fitness camp that offers instruction in the areas of aerobic and strength conditioning, mobility, nutrition and goal setting. Our camp provides a foundation for any sport but puts an emphasis on cross country and track & field. Many girls join our fitness camp having little experience and become amazing athletes in no time at all. If you want to get into shape, be challenged, and set new goals for the summer, then join GetFit. We even do a day hike in Griffith Park! Our camp is great for soccer, softball, and basketball players looking to fine tune their fitness levels.

Our parent meeting is highly recommended. Come learn more and ask questions.

One Day of Service

More than 600 volunteers participated in Downey's inaugural One Day of Service event earlier this month.

Churches, businesses, service clubs, non-profits, and residents spanned across the city to participate in simultaneous volunteer projects, from planting trees to assembling homeless care packages.

"Downey really has the heart of volunteer spirit," said Mayor Rick Rodriguez, who spearheaded One Day of Service. "You could tell by the look on everyone's faces that there's nothing more pleasurable than helping someone else."

We're Making Room for Measure S Improvements

Downey Día de los Muertos Art Festival

Postponed Until 2020

Downey Dia de los Muertos Art Festival - a Downey Success Story!

In just 6 years, Downey Dia de los Muertos Art Festival has grown to a major one day event where over 35,000 visitors and participants enjoy traditional Dia de los Muertos attractions, dancing, music and food. Our event has been recognized by West Ways Magazine and the Los Angeles Times as one of the southland's "best" Dia de los Muertos events.

This year Measure S reconstruction projects to the Downey Theatre courtyard and patio as well as to the Library - all key spaces for the Dia de los Muertos event - will be torn up and unusable. This will make hosting the event this year impossible - but will make next year's Downey Dia de los Muertos Art Festival better than ever!

The Festival returns on November 1st, 2020

We're now accepting vendor applications for the 7th Annual Downey Dia de los Muertos Art Festival.

What is Measure S and why is it impacting the Downey Dia de los Muertos Art Festival?

Measure S is a $50 million voter approved initiative to modernize and renovate facilities throughout the community of Downey. Four fire stations, the City Library, and a number of city parks will be reconstructed or renovated. Included in this will be the courtyard and patio area west of the Downey Theatre.

Cerritos College sets record with more than 5,000 graduates

The junior college saw a 25% increase in associate degrees for transfer.

NORWALK - For the fourth consecutive year, Cerritos College shattered its own graduation record, having certified the largest number of degrees and certificates awarded in the campus' history.

During Commencement 2019 its 61st annual commencement ceremony held on Friday, May 24, the College conferred more than 5,000 degrees and certificates. The Class of 2019 overwhelmingly surpassed last year's record-breaking number of degrees and certificates by almost 1,500 awards.

The college also saw a 25 percent increase in awards to students who earned an Associate Degree for Transfer (AA-T/AS-T) from 2018 to 2019, with more than 1,300 degrees awarded. The AA-T/AS-T degree guarantees transfer admission to the California State University system.

Since its inception in 2012, more than 5,700 students have earned AA-T/AS-T degrees at Cerritos College. The College currently has 27 AA-T/AS-T degree programs.

Angelica Fregoso, a graduate of the record-breaking Class of 2019, is receiving an AA-T in psychology. She is part of the college's Scholars' Honors Program, and is transferring to UCLA. Through the honors program, Angelica participated in UCLA's Community College to PhD Scholars Program, a seven-month research program.

In addition, Angelica will spend eight weeks at the University of Iowa completing its Summer Research Opportunity Program.

"I would not have the privilege to take advantage of these opportunities without the Scholars' Honors Program, and for that, I am eternally grateful," said Angelica. After earning her bachelor's degree in psychology, she plans to pursue a doctoral degree, and become a psychology research professor in order to give back to her community by mentoring.

Eric Draper, former White House chief photographer for President George W. Bush, served as the 61st commencement speaker. A Cerritos College alumnus, Draper inspired graduates to find a purpose in life and challenged them to "never underestimate themselves, never be afraid to ask for what they want, and not let their fears hold them back."

"The fact that our students are breaking graduation records year after year is unprecedented in our campus' history, this shows their drive to succeed and the commitment of our faculty, staff, administrators, and everyone at Cerritos college who make our students' education and success their number one priority," said Dr. Jose Fierro, Cerritos College President/ Superintendent.

"I am extremely proud of our graduates. The majority of our students are first generation who come from underrepresented backgrounds. They face incredible obstacles every day and it is especially gratifying to see them rewarded for their perseverance,"

This year's graduates will be transitioning to some of the nation's top colleges and universities, including the University of La Verne, Loyola Marymount University, USC, UC Berkeley, and UCLA, among other schools.

The Pangolin (exerpts)

This near artichoke with head and legs and grit-equipped gizzard... a true ant-eater, not cockroach-eater, who endures exhausting solitary trips through unfamiliar ground at night, returning before sunrise; stepping in the moonlight...

He draws away from danger unpugnaciously, with no sound but a harmless hiss; Or rolls himself into a ball that has power to defy all effort to unroll it; Nevertheless he has sting-proof scales; and nest of rocks closed with earth from inside, which he can thus darken.

Sun and moon and day and night and man and beast each with a splendor which man in all his vileness cannot set aside; each with an excellence! "Fearful yet to be feared," the armored ant-eater met by the driver-ant does not turn back, but engulfs what he can, the flattered sword-edged leafpoints on the tail and artichoke set leg-and body-plates quivering violently when it retaliates and swarms on him...

To explain grace requires a curious hand...

- Marianne Moore, 1936

Moore delighted in comparing "Man, in fighting, mechanicked like to pangolin." Hers is the curious hand. Poetry Matters is curated by Lorine Parks.

60 Words to celebrate the Downey Symphony Orchestra's 60th anniversary

A long-time Downey resident, professional composer, and musician, Lars Clutterham worked many years in the broadcast and film industries, and has written three new works for his "home-town Symphony," premiered by conductor Sharon Lavery. "A great honor," he says. "There's profound pleasure in discussing music with a fellow professional such as Sharon. The only thing better is actually playing it."

Symphony archives and conversation with Lars Clutterham.

Average 2BR rent in Downey is $2,020

DOWNEY –Downey rents have remained flat over the past month, however, they have increased marginally by 0.8% year-over-year, according to statistics released by ApartmentList.com.

Currently, median rents in Downey stand at $1,570 for a one-bedroom apartment and $2,020 for a two-bedroom.

Downey's year-over-year rent growth lags the state average of 1.2%, as well as the national average of 1.5%.

Throughout the past year, rent increases have been occurring not just in the city of Downey, but across the entire metro. Of the largest 10 cities that ApartmentList.com has data for in the Los Angeles metro, nine of them have seen prices rise.

Here's a look at how rents compare across some of the largest cities in the metro.

Lancaster has the least expensive rents in the Los Angeles metro, with a two-bedroom median of $1,610; additionally, the city has seen the fastest rent growth in the metro over the past month (1.1%).

Over the past year, Garden Grove is the only city in the metro that has seen rents fall, with a decline of 0.1%. Median two-bedrooms there cost $2,090, while one-bedrooms go for $1,630.

Irvine has the most expensive rents of the largest cities in the Los Angeles metro, with a two-bedroom median of $2,700; rents increased 0.8% over the past month and 1.1% over the past year.

The 2019-20 Women's Guild executive board of Our Lady of Perpetual Help was recently installed at Mass on May 17.

As rents have increased marginally in Downey, a few large cities nationwide have also seen rents grow modestly. Compared to most large cities across the country, Downey is less affordable for renters.

Rents increased slightly in other cities across the state, with California as a whole logging rent growth of 1.2% over the past year. For example, rents have grown by 2.3% in San Jose, 1.1% in San Francisco, and 0.7% in San Diego.

Downey's median two-bedroom rent of $2,020 is above the national average of $1,190. Nationwide, rents have grown by 1.5% over the past year compared to the 0.8% increase in Downey.
